Blue Guides are the best for the more serious traveller

By Andrew Porter

Blue Guides are the best guide books for the more serious traveller, for those who prefer to visit art galleries and museums rather than, well, less cultural places. I've been using them for around 40 years and have not regretted one moment of my long and happy relationship with Blue Guides.

Being comprehensive guides they are a tad heavier than the more lightweight ones, but quit kvetching, Reader, buy a satchel to hold it in...I can highly recommend the following company as purveyors of fine satchels, Chapman of Carlisle (UK), their fishing bags are perfect for keeping cameras, maps and guide books in whilst exploring New York.

By all means use other guides for information on hotels, places to eat and drink, shopping and LGBTQI venues but Blue Guides are the business for architecture, art galleries and history.

Carol von Pressentin Wright "has been writing and revising editions of BLUE GUIDE NEW YORK since 1976" . Her meticulously detailed writing in this, the fifth and latest edition of the BLUE GUIDE NEW YORK, should ensure this edition remains at the top of the list for the more discerning travellers to New York for quite some time.

The New York Times described an earlier edition as "Impressive and indispensable."

Absolutely the best guides for those looking to really appreciate a city.

By Andy R.

In the internet age, the need for a traditional travel guide with hotel listings and maps is becoming a thing of the past.

What is not and can no be replaceable is the ability to get a wealth of beautifully curated information on a destination, the stuff that makes a trip/ visit worthwhile.

The Blue Guides are absolutely the best guides for those looking to really appreciate a city.

Whether traveling, new to a city, or a native history buff, these are unparalleled in their informative and interesting content.

My only complaint is that they don't publish more of them for other cool cities. I always check for a Blue Guide when I get a new airplane ticket bought. I feel like there used to be more? HIGHLY RECOMMENDED.
