Brilliant one act plays!

By Amazon Customer

The first time I heard GreyLines and Bus Hounds in our playwrights workshop I was astonished. And that was a first draft! It is so impeccably well written that I was drinking in the dialogue like I would Horton Foote. Once you start reading either of these two one acts by Suzanne Chesshire, you will not put it down until you finish. And wait until you see them onstage! I had the honor to do so! I cannot recommend these plays more. Suzanne Chesshire is truly a brilliant writer.

Twisted realities, great plays!

By El Poet

If great theatre creeps into your subconscious and cracks open new perspectives leading you to see things about yourself you have never seen before, Suzanne Chesshire writes great theatre.

GreyLines and Bus Hounds (one of my all time favorite titles) and Sliding Sideways are two “chance encounter” one acts. In the first, a young wandering guitarist (Michael) is running from a troubled home with a self-destructive mother. He encounters a strange woman (Woman) who passes from identity to identity until Michael’s own reality becomes distorted, rearranged and solidified and he is pushed toward a definitive course of action.

Sliding Sideways takes place on a city street corner where a turf war between a singer (Savannah) and a religion hustler (Cassie) leads to unexpected explorations of parallel realities.

Both plays have tense, rhythmic dialogue that flies past building to fascinating twists and turns that carried my imagination to strange and wonderful places. Chesshire challenges both the heart and the mind. Her characters are starkly original and speak with wit and wisdom.

These plays are going to play in my head for a long time. I do not ask for anything more from great dramatic literature. You are gonna wanna read this stuff again and again.
